

BRITISH DANCE BLACK ROUTES

Until 23 March 2014

Don't miss British dance: Black routes, an exciting exhibition exploring the experiences of Black British dancers from 1946 to the present day.

The exhibition highlights their contributions to UK dance practice by looking at the origins of a variety of dance forms, from ballet and contemporary, to jazz and African People's Dance.

This exhibition was developed by De Montford University and York St John University. It has been funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council.

The International Slavery Museum is the only museum of its kind to look at aspects of both historical and contemporary slavery, as well as being an international hub for resources on human rights issues.
